THE NEXT 100 YEARS OF RELATIONS WITH THE U.S.
– THE CASE STUDY OF POLAND

CONFERENCE DRAFT AGENDA
WASHINGTON, D.C., SEPTEMBER 26-27, 2019

On September 26-27, 2019 in Washington, D.C. the Kulski Foundation is holding a conference entitled “The Best Way to Predict the Future is to Create it” – the next 100 years of relations with the U.S. – the case study of Poland. The conference is carried out in partnership with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Poland under a grant obtained in the competition “Public Diplomacy 2019”.

The current Polish-American relations are the best in decades, especially in such areas as trade, security and international policy. Polish economy has been experiencing a period of great prosperity, with a 5 percent GDP growth last year, which puts Poland among the world leaders of economic development. Although experts anticipate a global slowdown this year, the Polish economy will continue to grow rapidly. In 2017, Poland allocated 1.03% of its GDP to research and development and maintains an upward trend in financing innovation.

Economic growth also has a positive impact on defense, which, within the realm of international relations, is a guarantee of greater security on NATO’s eastern flank. Poland continues to strengthen NATO’s eastern flank, allocating 2.05% of the national GDP (in 2018) to finance the country’s defense capabilities. With 26.5% of the defense budget being spent on military equipment upgrades, Poland ranks 7 among the NATO largest defense budgets, i.e. the organization’s member that have achieved or exceeded the 2% spending target.

The centenary of Polish-American diplomatic relations is a good time for a debate on how to maintain and drive economic growth by focusing on relations between the two countries. The main goal of the conference is to address the challenges to and opportunities for future Polish-American trade, energy, defense and political cooperation. With this in mind, we are inviting 150-200 prominent business figures, government representatives, Members of Congress, scientists and experts to participate in the debate.
